“Mothers, you have a calling that can become the long-remembered ground of faith, not just for your children — mark this — but for the untold numbers who will be affected by your children. And that’s in addition to all the other thousands of ripple effects of faith in your life.”

John Piper

Ann Parkham did just that

Mother's Day is a sweet opportunity for Christians to celebrate one of God's most significant means of his common and redeeming grace.

For most, there's some bitter flavor somewhere. We live in a fallen world. All mothers are sinful — even Jesus's own mother knew well her need for a Savior (Luke 1:47) and for God's mercy (Luke 1:50). Whether your own mother monumentally failed you, or you're a mother who's all too aware of how you've failed your children, there is goodness and grace to acknowledge and appreciate in almost every situation, even when deeply tarnished by sin.

But for many of us, our hearts soar in thanksgiving when God brings to mind our mothers and grandmothers, or our wife, the mother of our children. Among those of us raised in believing homes — in which our parents were faithful in teaching and modeling the faith — we may enjoy, all the more, the priceless privilege of fulfilling Proverbs 31:28 on Mother's Day: “Her children arise up and call her blessed.”
