"God Hold us to that which drew us first,
when the Cross was the attraction,
and we wanted nothing else."

Pastor's Paragraphs

Oliver Ellsworth was Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court, 1796 – 1801. As high of an honor and position as that was, "he was above all an exemplary Christian, having confessed Christ in his youth; and in every station he was not ashamed of his Gospel. His religion was practical and vital---always at the prayer meetings, and a life-long friend of missions." Another individual wrote of Chief Justice Ellsworth, "guests would occasionally present at morning and evening devotions were solemnized by the fervor and sublimity of his prayers. He inculcated on all under his roof a reverence for the Sabbath, and was in the habit of gathering them around him, and reading them a sermon, in addition to the public worship of the day."
